

8 elephants destroy crops & irrigation systems in Manyam

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Parvathipuram-Manyam

A herd of eight wild elephants created havoc by damaging irrigation infrastructure in a palm oil orchard and destroying a banana crop on the outskirts of Puliganivalasa village in Salur mandal on Saturday. The elephants entered Salur mandal via Makkuvu in search of food and caused extensive damage to crops and agricultural facilities. The herd later moved towards Mavudi village in Makkuvu mandal while returning to its traditional habitat in Parvathipuram mandal. Residents said they were afraid to visit their farmlands after witnessing the destruction. Speaking to TNIE, Salur Forest Range Officer K Tavatinaidu said, "The herd of eight elephants entered Salur mandal a few days ago. It strayed into plantations and damaged the irrigation pump system and crops on the outskirts of Puliganivalasa. Upon receiving information from local residents, our staff reached the spot and sounded a high alert in both Salur and Makkuvu mandals. "We are monitoring the movement of the elephants with the help of field staff and elephant trackers. Awareness programmes are being conducted with support from the police and revenue departments to prevent man-animal conflict. Revenue officials have also imposed Section 163 of the BNS, formerly Section 144 of the CrPC, to prevent large gatherings in the affected areas. "The elephants are now moving back towards their traditional habitat in Parvathipuram mandal, as Salur mandal has limited water sources. Compensation will be disbursed after the concerned departments complete an assessment of the damage."

ANDHRA Pradesh is set to leverage AI to improve neonatal healthcare, with the State government launching a pilot project to automatically assess and record health indicators of newborn babies through smartphone-based video technology. In a statement issued on Saturday, Health Minister Y Satya Kumar Yadav announced that AI-powered newborn health monitoring services will be integrated into the mobile application used by Accredited Social Health Activists (ASHAs). The technology will enable automatic recording of critical health parameters such as weight, height, head circumference, chest circumference and arm measurements without physically touching the infant. The initiative is being implemented in partnership with Wadhvani AI, which has developed the 'Shishu Maapan' application. Under an agreement with the Health Department, the application will be integrated with the existing ASHA mobile platform. As part of the project, health officials will create an AI database using videos and measurements of 1,000 newborns. Data collection will be carried out in areas covered by Indiranagar, Koppuram Colony, Kaza and Yerrabalem UHCs, as well as the Pedavadlapudi PHC in Mangalagiri constituency. The Minister said training programmes for ASHA workers and ANMs have commenced in phases to prepare them for implementation of the project. Depending on the outcomes of the pilot initiative, the AI-based monitoring system will be expanded across the State. As per Satya Kumar, the technology is expected to reduce the workload on frontline workers while improving the quality and reliability of newborn healthcare services. He said the government is committed to utilising advanced technologies, including AI, to boost healthcare. ASHA workers must visit newborns at their homes six times within the first 42 days after birth to record health parameters. Currently, healthcare workers carry weighing scales, infantometers and measuring tapes to collect data. The process often takes between 10 and 15 minutes per household and can be difficult when infants are restless or uncooperative. 'Shishu Maapan' aims to address these challenges. Using a smartphone, it can estimate a newborn's weight and body measurements through video analysis without requiring physical contact. Once the mobile is positioned near the baby, the system automatically records the required data. Health and Family Welfare Commissioner G Veerapandian said the AI-powered system would help identify abnormalities and developmental issues in newborns at an early stage.

AP to leverage AI for neonatal care

AI-powered services will be integrated into smartphones used by ASHAs, says Health Min

'Tainted officer' gets key AP Markfed post

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Vijayawada

AP Markfed has come under scrutiny for entrusting a crucial accounts responsibility to an official who had figured in past vigilance inquiries, while allegedly overlooking senior eligible officers. The move has raised concerns within the cooperative sector, with questions over transparency in assigning sensitive responsibilities. According to sources, the official served as a procurement officer in Prakasam district during the 2017-18 season, when complaints alleged that black gram procured through middlem was shown in records as having been purchased directly from farmers. During official's tenure in Vizianagaram district, another vigilance probe was allegedly ordered following complaints over the diversion of fertilisers allotted to a cooperative society, with action needed.

VRO's suicide triggers protest

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Kurnool

TENSION prevailed at the Kurnool Collectorate after relatives of Village Revenue Officer Mohammed Hussain staged a protest with his body, alleging official harassment led to his death. Hussain, VRO of Venkayapalle, was found hanging outside his residence. Family members claimed he left a note blaming pressure over election duties. Protesters demanded action against those responsible. Collector A Siri said an inquiry was underway and noted that family issues and back pain could have resulted in it.
